LIVE ACTION ROLE PLAY

= LARP

LARP could be compared to a theatre play without audience and fixed script.

Participants receive a pre-written character or make one up through a series of workshops.

Joint imagination invigorates the plot created by game master.

For several minutes, hours or days players try on a new role, explore their attitude to given situation or environment.

Unlike other medias, LARPs engage all of senses, mind, emotions and body.

After the game players go through reflection to integrate acquired experience.

To get a better understanding of LARP, check the following videos:

1. Becoming the story - short (3:26) animation on how our imagination works in LARPs
2. Even shorter (2:20) video on Learning Through Roleplay

Issues to consider

- How can you use LARPs in your work with individuals struggling with barriers on physical, mental, educational, social, economical or geographical level?
- How can we overcome language and cultural barriers with LARPs to promote intercultural understanding?
- How can we design a "barrier-free" LARP for your chosen target group?
- How LARPs promote ecological and stay green at the same time?
- Which environments could benefit from LARPs promoting civic engagement and democratic values?
- Can LARPs enhance digital interaction with your target group?

We're inviting you to join our training and find the answers together.

PLAY IS A FUNDAMENTAL QUALITY OF HUMAN NATURE.

IT IS A UNIVERSAL TOOL FOR SHARING AND ADOPTING IDEAS AND VIEWPOINTS.

GOALS

After the training, you will:

- Have your own understanding of what is LARP
- Have a self-made LARP scenario on your professional topic to use with your target group (or at least a play-tested draft)
- Have tools on developing newLARPs on your own
- Know where to find free to use ready scenarios
- Know about props and how to use them
- Know how sound and light can add dimensions to the game for extra fascination
- Have a set of ideas how to make LARP "barrier-free" for your audience
- Have a great team-building tool to use in your work/study/friends community
